

Maggie Moore Alexander

Maggie Moore Alexander is President and a co-founder of Building Beauty based in Sorrento, Italy (www.buildingbeauty.org). She is also President of The Center for Environmental Structure (CES). For Building Beauty India she will be supporting the recruitment and selection of students.

CES which was established by Christopher Alexander in 1967 as a non-profit educational institution in California, USA. It has offered architects and engineers the opportunity to delve into profound research in the nature and qualities of Architecture and concurrently see the results manifested in actual buildings and projects designed and built worldwide.

Over the years, the educational and research character was expanded to include professional design and construction of towns and neighborhoods, buildings and interior spaces, public spaces and gardens, office furniture, hand-made tiles and other artifacts. Experimentation and research has been the main ingredient that attributes a particular quality to CES's architectural work, distinguishing it from other contemporary architecture.

Maggie serves as Christopher Alexander's editor, and has worked with him to produce The Nature of Order and The Battle for the Life and Beauty of the Earth: A Struggle Between Two World-Systems, as well as other projects. She has a Masters Degree in Organization Change and Development.

maggiemoorealexander@buildingbeauty.org