

Minal Sagare

Minal Sagare is an architect and urban designer with keen interest in the core questions of architecture, design of human habitations and aesthetics. She is equally engaged in understanding the multidisciplinary ties of architecture and urban design. She is actively involved into academics for past fifteen years, and has taught at Sinhgad College of Architecture and VIT's P.V.P. College of Architecture (PVPCOA) in Pune. At PVPCOA she was heading the post-graduate program in Urban Design for past five years. Along with the academics and practice she is involved in number of research assignments and received research scholarship from MASA (Maharashtra Association of Architecture Schools) and INTACH (Indian National Trust for Art and Cultural Heritage, New Delhi) in the past. Her research interests has been sacred geography, cultural geography, historic urban landscapes and human habitations in the context of liminal landscapes. She has presented her academic and research works at various national and international platforms.

